Thoughtless Trespassing.

I wonder how those young ladies, those aspiring young men and those business men from Emporium, who entered on my property on Whittemore Hill last Sunday, gathered my chestnuts, beat the trees with clubs and stones, and with large rocks thumped the trunks of the trees, thus loosening the bark and permanently injuring the trees, would enjoy being arrested for trespass and petty larceny, and thus be branded as lawbreakers, thieves and criminals? There is at hand abundant evidence and witnesses to convict. It is just as much theft in this case as for a person to enter any other place of business and help himself to what he might happen to want.

Unless such things cease at once somebody is liable to get into serious trouble, regardless of whom he or she may be.

Changes at Library.

Last Saturday being the first of October, a change was made in the Emmanuel Library, Mrs. S. E. Felt, who has been the Librarian for the past three years, having resigned her position, the vacancy was filled by the appointment of Mrs. Lizzie Hinkle. Mrs. Felt has been most faithful in the discharge of her duties and will be missed by the visitors at the library. She contemplates spending the winter in New York City, where she will be the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Rena Shafer. Mrs Hinkle, the present incumbent, is sure to make a success of the work and the visitors at the library are sure of the same hearty welcome in future as they received in the past.

Very Agreeable Callers.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. L. Butler, of Commercial Hotel, are entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Chas. McGinn, of Fredericktown, N. B., they having arrived Sunday evening. Mrs. McGinn is cousin to Mr. Butler, as well as his sister Mrs. James Bailey, West Fifth street—both families vieing to make their visit to Emporium pleasant. They are greatly delighted with the beautiful scenery in this section, especially the view from Whittemore Hill. Mr. McGinn is traveling representative of the National Sale Purchase Co. of Rochester, N. Y., and conducts very extensive clearance sales. The PRESS received a very pleasant call from both Mr. McGinn and Mr. Butler on Monday.

Surprise Party.

A very pleasant surprise was given to Rev. and Mrs. J. L. Bogue, Thursday evening, Sept. 29th, at the Baptist Parsonage. The affair was a pound party and many responded most heartily. Among those present were: Mrs. Mary Beers, Mr. and Mrs. Ikens and daughters, Mrs. Wm. Swartz, Mrs. Martin, C. H. Felt, Mr. and Mrs. Neidlinger, Miss Olmsted, Mrs. Goodnough, Miss Jennie Loucks, Miss Mollie Spence, Mr. Ellis, Mrs. Herbert Day, R. Fountain, A. Fountain and Carl Day.

Rev. F. B. Schriner Leaves.

The PRESS, as well as our citizens generally, deeply regret that the above named gentleman and his estimable family will leave Emporium and locate in Port Allegany, where the Rev. gentleman will devote a portion of his time to evangelistic work. Rev. T. W. Murray, of Eldred, comes to Emporium. Rev. Schriner is a conscientious christian gentleman, firm in his belief but just to those differing with him. He is a gentleman, every inch of him, and a reliable, companionable man.

In General Hospital.

Mrs. S. H. McDonough leaves to-day (Thusday) for Buffalo, where she will enter the Buffalo General Hospital. Mrs. McDonough will undergo a slight operation. We understand it is nothing very serious and Mrs. McDonough will be able to return home within a short time. We hope this is true.

Oyster Season.

This week we will have one of the best known brands of salt water oysters. Leave orders for Friday delivery.

Enjoyable Auto Party.

On Monday afternoon an auto party composed of Mr. and Mrs. E. Mead Floyd, Misses Elizabeth Crandell and Hazel Floyd and Mr. Joseph Kaye, Jr., autoed to Olean in Hon. Josiah Howard's touring car, with Mr. E. J. Smith at the wheel. Miss Floyd did not return to Emporium, her home being at Olean. She has been spending the past month here, guest of her brother and wife and has made many friends during her visit here, as she is a very winsome young lady. Miss Floyd possesses a fine saprano voice and very ably assisted the choir in Emmanuel Episcopal Church during her visit in Emporium. The ladies attended the theatre during the evening and the party returned to Emporium, leaving Olean at ten o'clock, arriving at home at one o'clock, a. m.

R. C. Dodson in Hospital.

Druggist Mr. R. C. Dodson, who has been a great sufferer for the past few months with muscular rheumatism, was taken to the hospital at Williamsport last Saturday evening, accompanied by his wife and Mr. J. A. Fisher. Mrs. Dodson and Mr. Fisher returned to Emporium on Monday afternoon. Mr. Dodson was resting as well as could be expected. Dr. Nutt is the attending physician, but up to the present time, there has been no diagnosis of the case. The family expect to hear to-day or to-morrow relative to the decision of the doctor. We hope for Mr. Dodson's speedy recovery.

Straw Ride.

About twenty members and guests of the Union Friendly Society enjoyed a straw-ride to the home of Miss Ethel Fisher, at Howard Siding, on Wednesday evening. A short business meeting was held upon the arrival of the "bunch" at the Fisher home after which the evening was devoted to a general good time. Officers were elected for the ensuing year which are as follows: President, W. S. Sterner; Vice President, Miss Marion Rentz; Secretary, Miss Helen Smutz and Treasurer, Allan Randolph.

After Diploma.

Mr. Howard Schriner, who has been employed in LaBar's furniture and undertaking establishment during the past two years will enter an undertaking school at Philadelphia on Monday next, where he will take a twelve weeks course in embalming. He is a very apt young man and will be of great assistance when he returns, their services during the past three months being almost daily called, owing to the large number of deaths, taxing that establishment.

While speaking of the large number of deaths we called on State Health Officer, F. G. Judd, for a report of the number of deaths in Emporium, Shippen and Lumber since July 1st up to Oct. 5th and we were surprised to be informed that the number was 24, as follows: July, two in Emporium, four Shippen; Aug, Emporium, three, Shippen, three, Lumber one; Sept. Emporium, seven, Shippen two and Lumber two.

Wellington Bubar.

Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Bubar, who have been in very poor health for a long time, have disposed of their Sixth street residence to Edward Bubb, the consideration being $800 Mr. and Mrs. B. will next week move to Buffalo and make their home with their son, Edward, who holds a good position.

Mr. and Mrs. Bubar are respected citizens of this place and we regret to have them leave our town, but owing to poor health possibly it is for the best.

Friday Evening at Emmanuel Church.

On the First Friday evenings of each month the Rector will deliver a series of Little Sermons to the little men and women. The subject next Friday evening will be: "Play." DEATH'S DOINGS.

LARRABEE.

Last Saturday evening, about 8:15 o'clock, our citizens were pained to hear of the sudden death of Mrs. Georgianna M. Larrabee, wife of our old and highly respected citizen, Mr. M. M. Larrabee, at the family residence East Fourth street, after an illness of several months. While the sad news was painful to the excellent lady's many friends yet her death was not a surprise to those familiar with the circumstances.

Mrs. Larrabee, daughter of Capt. B. S., and Mary A. Mayo, both deceased, was born in Hampden, Maine, in July, 1847, therefore being aged 63 years and three months. She came to Cameron county in 1868, her father being engaged in lumbering operations at Cameron, with his brothers. Later she taught school in Emporium for two years when she met and married M. M. Larrabee, Sept. 20th, 1871. She leaves to mourn her death, her husband and three children: Marian E., Don M., and Clifton S. Larrabee, also one brother, Mr. E. B. Mayo, of Minneapolis, Minn.

About six years ago Mrs. Larrabee was afflicted with diabetes and that dread malady brought about a greatly weakened condition, although she was able to be about her home and was always in good spirits. She had a warm, genial disposition, which greatly helped her to bear her affliction bravely and cheerfully. During the week preceeding her death she had enjoyed a happy visit with her entire family, gathered at her home and she ate dinner with them all, the evening of her death. Shortly after seven o'clock, Saturday evening, she went up stairs to put her little grandson to sleep and after doing that returned to the room below, complaining of feeling weak. She laid down for a little while and then started back up stairs to retire. When she reached the top of the stair case she was seen by her son Don to be struggling as if she was unable to go further and he quickly assisted her to her room and medical assistance was summoned. It was without avail and within fifteen minutes she passed away, surrounded by her husband and children.

We have known and highly respected the deceased ever since she came to Emporium. Her excellent qualities were of the highest order. Aside from the attention to her household duties and cares, she always found time to devote to the development of her artistic tastes, both in painting and music, in which branches she possessed marked talent and skill. Mrs. Larrabee was a scholarly and well read lady and her home contained much of the best literature and was a source of true culture and refinement. Many able and pleasing articles have appeared in the PRESS from her pen and upon numerous occasions she has spoken upon live questions before the public. She knew what to say, when to say it and when to stop.

One of the organizations to which she gave much of her attention and effort was the Womens Relief Corps.

Above all, Mrs. Larrabee was in the fullest sense, a christian in all that the name implies. She became a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Hampden, Maine, when a girl and during her active and useful life, was a true, consistent christian woman. As one who knew her well has said, "Mrs. Larrabee lived her christianity every day in her many acts of kindness and thoughtfulness of others and her life has been a blessing to the community." Many are the stricken homes that have been aided and comforted by her and her broad and generous sympathy went out to the afflicted at all times. To those of her home-circle, husband, children and grand-children, who were the constant objects of her gentle ministrations and love, her sudden taking away has come as a terrible blow, filling their hearts with the deepest sorrow, but the memory of her beautiful life and character will ever remain for them a sacred heritage. Her life was such as to leave a lasting impression for good upon all who knew her, and we all feel that she was one of those for whom it was promised, ages ago, by the prophet, that—

"At evening time it shall be light."

THE FUNERAL.

The funeral services were held from the family residence Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock and was very largely attended. Religious services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. J. F. Anderson, pastor of M. E. Church, assisted by Rev. R. H. Bent, pastor of Presbyterian Church and District Supt. E. M. Stevens of Williamsport who happened to be in town.

The very large attendance of relatives and friends and the beautiful floral offerings were silent yet emphatic expressions of regard for the departed. The music was very appropriate and consisted of favorite hymns of deceased, "Lead Kindly Light" and "Abide With Me." At the close of the services, Mrs. C. L. Cassingham, of Cleveland, O., a niece of the deceased, sweetly rendered "When I Shall Meet Him Face to Face."

The pall bearers were all old friends and neighbors: J. F. Parsons, G. F. Balcom, Hon. J. C. Johnson, Hon. H. H. Mullin, M. C. Tulis and F. D. Leet, Esq.

MRS. GREEN'S FUNERAL.

The burial of Mrs. Mary Margaret Green, wife of Hon. B. W. Green, was held from the family residence, Sixth street, last Saturday afternoon at two o'clock, being largely attended by the relatives and friends of the deceased and family. The floral offerings were very numerous tokens of regard, requiring a large touring car to convey them to the Wiley cemetery. The services commenced promptly, at the appointed hour, Rev. M. L. Tate, Rector of Emmanuel Episcopal Church, Archdeacon R. S. Radcliffe, Rector of Grace Episcopal Church Ridgway, assisting. The singing was furnished by a quartette composed of Mrs. Herbert Day, Miss Myrtle Olmsted, H. C. Olmsted and C. H. Felt, beautifully rendering favorite hymns.

Hymn No. 242 being appropriate, especially verse five, which we quote:

"Earth to earth, and dust to dust.
Calmly now the words we say,
Left behind, we wait in trust
For the resurrection-day.
Father, in Thy gracious keeping,
Leave we now Thy servant sleeping."

The pall-bearers were selected from the neighbors of the family and were: Jos. Kaye, Jay P. Felt, W. H. Howard, Jas. P. Creighton, T. F. Moore and H. H. Mullin.

Next Sunday evening, October 9th, the Rev. M. L. Tate, Rector of Emmanuel Episcopal Church, will preach a sermon to the young men, taking as his subject, "Young Men—Errors and Ambition." All the young men of Emporium who possibly can should attend Emmanuel Episcopal Church and hear the Rector's sermon, which no doubt will be full of good sound advice for the young men.

Serious Accident.

Runaway Train Ditched to Save Collision.

This morning (Thursday) about nine o'clock, a freight train composed of about twenty cars, loaded with sacked flour, was in some unaccountable manner lost control of by the engineer, coming down the steep grade into Siverville. At this point the railroad company are putting in double tracks but there is a "d" rail in this location to be used in case of runaway trains and is always left open. The Buffalo Express train, No. 59, which leaves Emporium Junction at 8:45 a. m., was just about due at Sizerville and in order to save a head-on collision the operator was compelled to leave the "d" rail switch open and thereby ditch the runaway freight train. The engineer and two firemen, who were on the engine, were very seriously injured and their injuries may prove fatal. Train No. 59 was flagged and ordered back to Emporium Junction and was taken over the P. & E. division to Johnsonburg, thence by way of Smethport and Larrabee to the Buffalo Division. The freight cars are piled up and flour is scattered in all directions. While being a very serious wreck, yet it may be considered lucky that no one was killed and that the Express train was a little late and thereby saved a head-on collision.

Coyle-Foster.

On Wednesday morning October 5th, at six o'clock, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Coyle, Fourth St, occurred the marriage of their only daughter, Miss Lena, to Mr. Edward Foster, son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin H. Foster, Rev. Father T. B. Downey, Rector of St. Mark's Church, performed the ceremony. The bride was attended by Miss Kathryn "Doll" Hogan, as Maid of Honor, while Mr. C. Harold Seger did the duties of groomsman. The bride was very becomingly gowned in a brown traveling suit and the Maid of Honor wore a blue gown of Rajah silk. The groom and his attendant wore the conventional black. After the wedding ceremony an elaborate breakfast was served. Those in attendance at the wedding, besides the bridal party, were Mr. and Mrs. John Coyle, Mr. and Mrs. Martin H. Foster, Mrs. Charles Seger, Mrs. B. Coyle, Mrs. P. Haley, and Mrs. E. D. White.

Miss Coyle, now Mrs. Foster, has spent her entire life in Emporium, and is known to be a person of a jovial disposition, and is greatly admired by her host of friends. She is sure to make a true help-mate to the husband of her choice. Mr. Foster is also well and favorably known, and is an industrious and upright young man of many sterling qualities. The happy couple departed on the Buffalo Express train, No. 59, for an extended wedding trip, which will include Buffalo and Niagara Falls and other northern points. The PRESS joins with their host of friends in wishing them every happiness and a bon voyage over the sea of life.

A Bear Killing.

Bear trappers, Messrs. John Clark, Edward Clark, Alex. Schwab, George Stewart and E. D. Krape left for Seven Springs Run Tuesday evening at 5:30, p. m., to get a bear which was in a trap at that point, and found by Jack Clark in the morning while looking over his traps.

They made a noble effort to bring the bear home alive and succeeded very well for about three miles from the pen when he slipped the muzzle they had on him. Geo. Stewart was leading him and when the muzzle came off he had the scare of his life, as the bear gave him a few hugs before he could get hold of his knife, which he did finally get and stabbed it, after he got a few gentle love taps, and four or five hugs. George says he is not afraid of the biggest bear now he ever saw, for he knows just how to handle them. When the muzzle came off, Messrs. Krape, Ed. Clark and Alex. Schwab took for the brush and Mr. John Clark took to a tree, and George had to fight his own battles, but he can't blame the rest any, as Clark and Schwab each got a left-hander from Mr. Bear which put them out for the count while they were muzzling and hobbling him and were not going to take any more chances. The bear weighed 170 pounds dressed. They shipped the carcass to Philadelphia Wednesday afternoon.

Eastern Star.

On Friday afternoon, October 21st, at three o'clock, the order of the Eastern Star will be organized in Emporium. This new order will be known as Chapter 101, Eastern Star. Mrs. M. A. Rockwell has been untiring in her efforts to get the Chapter organized and at last her efforts are crowned with success. It will probably be a strong order.

In the Field.

It is reported that Prof. C. E. Plasterer, principal of Emporium schools, is a candidate for County Superintendent. This is not official but possibly correct.

Sidney Erin Pilson.

Star and leading man of "The Merry Widow" and "The Married Man," the three act society comedy, which will be presented at the Emporium Opera House, on Thursday, Oct. 6th, is an actor of national reputation, a master of stage craft, versed in every detail of dramatic technique. His portrayal of "The Married Man" is worth going miles to see. The part fits him so well that he has played it for 12 consecutive years, and each year the crowds that witness "The Merry Widow" and "The Married Man" are greater than the preceding years. Over one million laughing patrons have pronounced the "wrinkle wrecking," "blues dispelling" comedy to be the best American play written since the invention of pen, ink and paper.

Training for Basket Ball.

The members of the Athletic Association of the Emporium High School have commenced training for the season's basket ball games. Last Saturday morning a party of ten enjoyed a cross country run of about five miles. This year promises to be a very successful year in athletics and the boys are looking forward to some exciting games with the surrounding towns.

Will Leave Emporium.

Mr. Edward D. Armstrong, superintendant at the duPont Powder Plant at this place, is spending the week at Houghton, Mich., where he is looking over a new powder plant. If every thing turns out favorably, Mr. Armstrog will accept the position of superintendent at that plant. Mr. Armstrong has risen steadily in the ranks of superintendents of the duPont Company and receiving this advancement plainly shows the high appreciation by the Company of his services. We congratulate Mr. Armstrong on his success, yet we will miss Mr. Armstrong and his estimable family from our town, where they have made many friends during their short residence here.

NEEDS NO DEFENSE

SUCCESS OF PROTECTION POLICY ITS OWN ARGUMENT.

Prosperity of the Country Under Beneficent System Has Been Continuous—Figures That Prove Truth of Claim.

The policy of protection justifies itself, and its continuance is a continuing argument in favor of its continuance.

The energy generated by the confidence of 90,000,000 people in the stability of the policy of protection has set in motion and kept in motion 600,000 factories, having an annual output of more than $13,000,000,000, and paying out in wages $3,000,000,000 to 6,000,000 people, whose purchasing power depends upon their employment.

One gentleman who has spoken here has referred to what he called the "protected sections" of our country, but the fortunes of all our people—north, south, east and west; farmers, manufacturers, artisans, laborers and professional men—are all bound together.

Long ago, when the ratification of the federal constitution was under consideration in the Massachusetts assembly, Jonathan Smith, a farmer from the Berkshire Hills, in reply to one Amos Singletary, put the whole question in a nutshell then and for all time when he said:

"These lawyers, these moneyed men, these men of learning, are all embarked in the same cause with us, and we must all sink or swim together."

This policy of protection has added to the gold dug from American mines foreign gold paid for the products of American labor.

It has kept all the wheels, shafts and bands of production in motion until they have developed an aggregate of 15,000,000 horse power, equivalent to the power of 90,000,000 men.

It has built railroads by giving them something to carry from place to place, and cities and towns and factories have sprung up along their rights of way.

It has built by locating factories in their midst, and the factory makes all the difference between the village and the city.

It has cleared and improved farms and made farmers prosperous by giving them a market at their doors for what they raise to sell.

It has fostered and encouraged American industry until our own internal free trade commerce over our own rivers, lakes and railroads is estimated at $25,000,000,000.

It is justified by our prosperity, gathered from the legitimate spoils of trade, in which both labor and capital have participated; justified by the policy of other nations; and justified by the declarations of their statesmen.

It is justified by the quality of American citizenship as compared with the quality of foreign citizenship, justified by the savings of labor, and justified by every home owned by an American workingman under the American flag.—Representative Hamilton of Michigan.

Pretty Poor Economic Fodder.

Some one in Washington who belongs to the "lay it all to the tariff" class professes to be profoundly shocked because, as he learns, there is an effort to enlist the farmers more actively in the protection cause. If he did not know it, the farmers always have been deeply interested in that matter, for they have realized that the development of American industries meant bigger and better markets for the American agricultural products. So why should they not favor protection, both for the direct safeguards which it throws about their interests and for the indirect benefits accruing from the system? There have been many attempts to "fool the farmer" on this point, but they have never succeeded. That is one reason why as a rule a thriving farming community is strongly Republican. Democratic tariff for revenue only is pretty poor economic fodder for the American tiller of the soil.—Troy Times.

No Reproaches, No Scolding.

President Taft writes in excellent temper. He appears to realize that while the president of the United States must be, by modern practise, the leader of the party that elects him, he need not be the censor of the thought of the nation. Not a few men in President Taft's position would have replied rather hotly to criticisms of their policies similar to those which have been levelled at him.

Responsibility for Legislation.

The president asserts with reason that the recent session of congress was productive of more good legislation than came from any of its recent predecessors.—Chicago News.

Question Before the People.

With the distinct and clearly defined issues made more prominent than ever by the president's text book letter, the campaign will be fought out by the united Republican party against the one enemy—Democracy. Shall we elect a house of representatives that will continue the splendid constructive work of the past, that will uphold our president, or shall we put in partial power a party to check all progress and prosperity, if not to scuttle and possibly wreck the good old ship of state?

IMPORTANT NOT TO FORGET

Protection as Against Free Trade Is the Issue in the Coming Elections.

The issue is protection against free trade. The Philadelphia Enquirer correctly diagnoses the present political situation. "The Democratic party," it says, "maintains upon this question (the protective tariff) the uncompromisingly hostile attitude which it has traditionally presented. It continues to insist on the ideal excellence of the free trade theory, and were it to be returned to power it would be bound by its pledges to carry that theory as far into practise as circumstances should permit. This is a fact which it is important not to forget, and which, amid the multiplicity of other considerations now engaging the public thoughts, needs to be steadily emphasized and conspicuously exhibited. Republicans who think that the protective principle has now been so firmly established in the United States as to be beyond the reach of danger deceive themselves. It remains as much as ever the object of Democratic animosity, and eternal vigilance is no less than ever the price of its preservation. There is every reason why during the campaign now impending this great, this vital, this paramount issue should be kept to the front, and the president's wisdom in giving it prominence is the greater because of the deceptive sense of security which in this respect prevails. Too many people who depend upon the tariff for their prosperity, for their comfort, for their daily bread are indifferent to the insidious attacks of which it is the object and are allowing themselves to think that there is no longer any occasion for them to rally to its support.

This may seem strange when one recalls the painful experiences through which the coutnry passed during a brief though all too prolonged period of Democratic ascendency, but the human memory is short and there is always a disposition alike to assume the permanence and to underestimate the value of present blessings. Our protective system can only be maintained by the votes of its adherents, and in order that it may be maintained the Republican party must be kept in power. The president, besides designating the tariff as the paramount issue, outlines a program for the legislative application of the principle involved, which is admirably adapted to derive a maximum of benefit from the protective system and to consolidate the elements of the Republican party."

Good Time to Go Slow.

The sound protectionist is no opponent of tariff revision at the proper time, and has always approved such changes in schedules as conditions seemed to warrant. But he never has and he never will join in the cry for tariff revision in the interest of foreign as against home industries, and that is what very much of the demand for lower duties means. A case directly in point is furnished by the present situation in the cotton manufacturing industry. Owing to the high price of raw material, due partly to anticipated shortage in the cotton crop and largely to speculation, mills are operating on short time or suspending entirely for a season. There is not a cent of duty on cotton, and the rates on cotton goods have been almost unchanged. How can the responsibility for the trouble in the cotton-spinning and cotton-cloth-making industries be laid to the tariff? Fibre and Fabric suggests this question when it says: "We find that the years under the former tariff were the most prosperous in the history of our country. Labor was fully employed, and wages advanced ten to twenty per cent. The present tariff is almost identical, so far as the wool and cotton schedules are concerned, yet the people are being urged to send men to Washington to deliberately open the way for foreign manufacturers to serve America the same as Canada has been served, and kill off a few hundred textile mills and throw thousands of operatives out of their chosen occupation permanently." It is well to have tariff revision when needed, but a revision that will put American manufacturers out of business and American wage-earners out of work and which will surrender our markets to foreigners is not the kind to commend itself to the thoughtful American citizen.

Has the True Ring.

President Taft reminds congress that it still has other pledges to be kept, including legislation providing for the issue of stocks and bonds by interstate railways, the limitation of the power of the federal injunctions, the creating of a national bureau of health and the encouragement of our merchant marine. The letter, as a whole, has the ring of real Republicanism, and undoubtedly will prove a valuable contribution to the literature of the congressional campaign!

No Brand Here.

The Boston Advertiser declares that the Taft tariff program must appeal to every honest man in the party, whether classed as "regular," "progressive," "insurgent" or otherwise. "There is no need for a label to this kind of Republicanism," says the Advertiser. "It is a plank upon which every Republican can stand. It is the sane and direct method for handling the tariff and adjusting it to the changing needs from year to year without violence to business, and without stirring political excitement."

THE LIMELIGHT

IN CHARGE AT WEST POINT

Maj. Gen. Thomas H. Barry, U. S. A., who has become superintendent of the United States Military academy at West Point, is what Supreme Court Justice O'Gorman recently termed "a typical product of New York city." He was born and reared in the old First ward, and there are now in New York men who will tell you that "Tom" Barry was the handsomest boy in the old ward, and that when he came back from West Point on furlough the younger boys were wont to point him out as their hero.

General Barry was one of the popular cadets during the four years he was at the academy. As an athlete he stood in the front rank, and he stood high as a student. In June, 1877, he received his diploma, and as a second lieutenant was assigned to the famous Seventh cavalry, Custer's old command. After three years in the Seventh General Barry was transferred to the infantry arm and assigned to the First infantry as a first lieutenant. Two years later he was promoted captain, and after that passing through every grade until in August, 1903, President Roosevelt made him a brigadier general. In April, 1908, the same president promoted him to his present rank, the highest under the present law that an army officer can attain.

General Barry as superintendent at West Point is the second officer of his rank to hold that post since West Point was founded. The other was Lieut. Gen. John M. Schofield, who was a major general when appointed superintendent in 1876.

No officer in the army has a finer record than General Barry. In the Spanish war he was an adjutant general, and after the close of that war he saw hard service in the Philippines. When the Cuban government failed to make good several years ago, with the result that the Americans had to reoccupy the island, General Barry was designated by President Roosevelt as commander-in-chief of the Army of Cuban Pacification, as it was known, and in that capacity he did his work so thoroughly that when the island was for a second time turned back to its own people to rule General Barry was accorded when he left an ovation such as few officers have ever received at home or abroad.

FEDERAL CHIEF OF MINES

In the appointment of Dr. Joseph A. Holmes to be director of the new bureau of mines it is conceded in Washington that probably the best equipped man for the position in the United States has been gained for this important post.

Ever since congress passed the bill creating the bureau and giving it authority to investigate mine disasters, make experiments and suggest means whereby accidents may be decreased and the yearly casualty list shortened, efforts have been made by hundreds of interested persons to have Dr. Holmes selected as chief. The indorsement of all the coal operators' associations has been given, every prominent mining engineer in the country, including John Hays Hammond, has made his plea for Dr. Holmes, and the miners' union has added its efforts in his cause.

Three great delegations visited Washington early in the summer to urge the appointment, the managers of sixty collieries joined in the laudatory chorus, and sixty-two senators put their names to a petition in his behalf.

All this recognition was won by Dr. Holmes while serving as chief technologist of the technological branch of the geological survey. In this capacity he was carrying on in a minor way the work which he now will develop to the fullest extent.

While the operations of the technological bureau have not been widespread, because of lack of funds and authority, still the men under Dr. Holmes were able to diminish mine disasters. They personally saved the lives of many imprisoned miners by going to their rescue in the face of dangers which would have meant death to less experienced men with poorer equipment.

The work of making mines safe has occupied the attention of Dr. Holmes for years, and he has made rapid advancement in the finding of effective means to the end which he has sought. He gained the confidence of labor and capital, and it is well known here that his subordinates are loyalty itself to the chief.

WOMAN WHO COST A MILLION

The series of exquisite gowns worn by Mrs. William B. Leeds of New York, Newport and London, has been the feature of the season at the ultra-fashionable watering place of Deauville, France. She is reported as having had great social success and has given a succession of delightful entertainments. Mrs. William B. Leeds, it will be remembered, is the woman who cost her husband one million dollars, and who refused the importunities of royal and noble suitors who were after her fortune, estimated at thirty times that amount.

Her maiden name was Nannie Stewart. She was the daughter of a wealthy Cleveland banker and was said to be the handsomest girl in Ohio. She married George E. Worthington. They disagreed, and Leeds, also a married man, became infatuated with her. It is said that Leeds paid his wife one million dollars for a divorce. Mrs. Worthington also secured a legal separation from her husband, and three days later the wedding took place.

Leeds made his new bride the present of jewelry worth over a million, a steam yacht, and a two million dollar palace in New York city. While on a visit to Paris, Leeds bought his wife a $200,000 pearl necklace. She wore this on several occasions, had them unstrung and they were exported in a bag to the United States and entered at the custom house as loose pearls.

Then began her battle with the treasury, which has become celebrated. Although the pearls were apparently imported by a Paris jeweler, the customs authorities considered the action a subterfuge and demanded the 60 per cent. customary duty on a necklace. Mrs. Leeds insisted that they were dutiable at 11 per cent. as indiscriminate pearls and won the day and incidentally some $50,000 which otherwise would have gone to the government.

TO HEAD THE GOULD FAMILY

One of the sons of the very rich who does not believe that his life should be given up to idleness and sports is Kingdon Gould, the eldest of the seven children of George Jay Gould. Kingdon is only twenty-three years old, but he knows a whole lot about his father's interests and, for that matter, about the interests of the entire Gould family. This is as it should be, for he is destined to take his father's place as the head of that multi-millionaire family. He is a well-educated man without evil habits and with a love for work. This week he left to join the rest of the Gould family in Europe. He would have gone with them last spring, but he felt that he wanted to familiarize himself with the Gould railroad system in the southwest. So instead of lolling about the various resorts of the old world he has been working early and late and has gone over every foot of the 9,000 miles of the system, meeting the managers, foremen and even the laborers and studying the conditions. There is hardly a mile of track in the whole system with which he is not familiar.

With the prospect for a continuation and increase in good times Mr. Gould says he is entirely satisfied. Conditions in the southwest are very promising. The only possible deterrent influence is a political one and he believes that will disappear after the fall elections.

Someone Might Get Hurt.

Pietro had drifted to Florida and was working with a gang at railroad construction. He had been told to beware of rattlesnakes, but assured that they would always give the warning rattle before striking.

One hot day he was eating his noon luncheon on a pine log when he saw a big rattler coiled a few feet in front of him. He eyed the serpent and began to shift his legs over the log. He had barely got them out of the way when the snake's fangs hit the bark beneath him.

"Good-Night and Pleasant Dreams."

Two things mean sweet sleep—a clear conscience and a clean bed. No one is going to put you in a bed they think is not clean, but haven't you noticed sometimes that the pillow cases and sheets have a stale, musty smell, and that they are harsh and have an unpleasant feeling? That is because they are washed with soaps that are full of rosin and strong caustics. There's only one soap for bedding. That is "Easy Task Soap." Pure cocoanut oil, pure borax, naphtha and other healthfully sterilizing and cleansing agents compose "Easy Task Soap," and bedding washed with it is sure to come from the wash so beautiful that it makes the housewife proud.

Pierp's Appetite

J. P. Morgan, Sr., was always a good trencherman in his youth and he has as good an appetite today as he ever had, not only for corned beef and cabbage—his favorite dish—but for other foods. If the Morgan, who dazzled the Teutons with his mathematics when he was a German university post-graduate student, had accepted the chair of mathematics offered to him by Heidelberg, instead of his Yankee corned beef and cabbage it might have been frankfurters and sauerkraut.—New York Press.

Beware the Dog!

A family moved from the city to a suburban locality and were told that they should get a watchdog to guard the premises at night. So they bought the largest dog that was for sale in the kennels of a neighboring dog fancier, who was a German. Shortly afterward the house was entered by burglars, who made a good haul, while the big dog slept. The man went to the dog fancier and told him about it.

"Vell, vat you need now," said the dog merchant, "is a leedle dog to vake up the big dog."—Everybody's.

Perfectly Harmless.

A little girl of three years, whose father had bought her some firecrackers and sky rockets for the Fourth of July, wanted to know what they were for. On being told their purpose, she anxiously inquired if they would hurt anybody. FOR EARLY FALL

WHEN summer millinery begins to look jaded and it is still too warm for heavy winter hats, one must take to "between seasons" millinery or to the styles that come under the head of "all-the-year-round" millinery. The silk covered hats that appear in September and those made of silk fancy braids offer the best choice to the purchaser for a number of seasons. First because they are not too heavy looking for warm autumn days; then they are conservative in shape, not running to any extremes, and they are very durable and able to stand the little spells of bad weather that portend the coming winter. After serving their purpose for fall, they come in handy during the winter for stormy weather when the best hat must be saved, and they prove altogether desirable for general utility until early spring arrives and demands its own between seasons head wear.

These hats are manufactured ready for trimming and are excellent in shape and fit well on the head. As a rule no bandean is required with them, and they are therefore easy for the home milliner to manage.

The trimmings selected must be in harmony with the shape, that is designed to withstand weather and wear. Natural or very well made wings, fancy feathers, ribbons, velvet and compact, strong-colored fall flowers give one an ample choice—malines, especially those that are waterproofed, are very useful and the fashion of drawing maline over the feather trimming to keep it from blowing about is sensible and pretty as well as thoroughly appreciated.

In fashioning the trimming for such a hat, folds and plaitings or other compact arrangements of the fabric used, are altogether desirable for they are not easily disarranged. The hats of silk braid and silk hats with velvet facings are often simply trimmed with big bows made of taffeta or corded silk. A single strip of silk is split along the center, lengthwise, hemmed at the edges and stiffened by thrusting a fine wire in the hems. A single large mow and collar made of two yards of silk, which makes a strip four yards long, is all the trimming required. Its great advantage lies in the fact that it may be taken off, freshened, pressed and replaced on the hat.

There are any number of pretty and inexpensive fancy feathers to choose from and they are all made from the plumage of domestic fowls or birds that we may use with a clear conscience. Wings always make a smart trimming and the big ornaments, many of them in Persian colorings and designs, are destined to be a great help to the amateur milliner in turning out a creditable and useful hat.

PLAIN AND DAINTY.

This is quite a plain blouse made with pointed yoke at the back; it is suitable for making up in almost any washing blouse material. One tuck an inch wide is carried from waist to shoulder each side front, where it is joined to the yoke; there is a wide box-pleat in center under which are hooks and eyes or buttons for fastening.

The deep turn-over collar and pointed cuffs are bound with plain material. A kid belt and crepe-de-Chine tie are worn.

Material required, 2¾ yards 28 inches wide.

Neck Ruches.

Crocheted neck ruches are a novel idea and very smart and practical. If sewed to folds of lawn or linen these ruchings may be laundered without taking apart. Dainty shades of wash material to match gowns may also be used, and a chiffon fold next to the throat adds to the attractiveness of the same.

FOLLOW ONE COLOR SCHEME

Advice From Writer Who Should Be an Expert on Art of Dressing Economically.

It seems strange that more women who must practice economy in dressing do not follow a distinct color scheme. I find it best to use the same color for a year; then have a change for the sake of variety. In this way all of one's accessories correspond, and a much better effect is produced for the same expenditure of money. The "best" afternoon gown may be worn with either the summer or winter hat and yet look as if they were made for each other. Girdles, collars, and parasols may always be made to do double or triple duty, and yet always be exquisite taste. This idea is not new, but it is surprising how seldom we see it carried out by the woman of moderate income; more often we hear the explanation that the blue gown was chosen because "I haven't had anything blue for an age," and it is accordingly worn with a brown coat, tan gloves and a black hat.—The Housekeeper.

Milady's Lockets.

The newest lockets are very large.

They are worn on a slender gold or platinum chain.

The locket itself is studded with brilliants or colored stones.

These are of course only for "dress-up" occasions.

For street or day wear the jeweled locket seems out of place.

For this purpose there are many in silver and steel which are both appropriate and chic.

With two or three imitation dark stones the effect is elegant without being overdone.

Are Long Skirts to Come?

Not yet has the long skirt come to be accepted for other than dressy wear, yet the makers of fashion recommend it for more constant use, and the American women are adopting it slowly.

WANTED, A New King for Palawan

THE Tagabanos are disconsolate, for their man-god, soldier-king is dead. Salip Akib and Salip Tomi, the pirate Moro chiefs, are again despoiling the peaceful and fertile island of Palawan, for was not the man they had come to fear as the devil incarnate seen to tumble ingloriously from a boat, flounder helplessly and sink to the bottom. Lieut. Edward Y. Miller, the governor of the most outlying of all Uncle Sam's territory, and the inspired uplifter of its people, has been drowned in the course of duty and where is the man who will be able to fill his place?

This is the question that is facing the Filipino government and the Bureau of Insular Affairs. This is the question that is bringing to light a piece of work that has been carried forward in the wilds of the great East that is as full of romance and accomplishment as the most fanciful yarn ever spun by the imagination.

For Lieut. Miller, U. S. A., has for eight years been absolutely ruler over 34,000 people; wild, barbaric, unchristion. He has single-handed brought peace to those people in the place of continuous warfare. He has repelled the Moro pirates in many pitched battles, armed and drilled his natives and made his coasts a place to be shunned of all else by these gypsies of the sea.

Yet Miller died ingloriously a month ago from falling overboard from a boat in the still waters of an inland stream. The Moros have learned of the nature of his death in such a simple emergency that any mere native would have been able to save himself. The fear of him and his kind has consequently vanished and the Moros are again at war.

Dean C. Worcester, American secretary of the interior for the Philippines, came a little later into Palawan to inaugurate Emergency Governor Evans, was attacked by the Moros and much blood has been shed. All is chaos in Palawan, where peace has reigned for six years. The insular bureau and the provisional government is looking the 90,000,000 over for a man who can fill the place of the dead governor-king, but with little hope of success.

All of which leads to the story of Lieutenant Miller. He was at the time of his death a member of the Twenty-ninth Infantry, but had never seen that regiment and was unknown to its officers. This because of the fact that he had been, since the time of his appointment, on detached duty as governor of Palawan. At the breaking out of the Spanish-American war he had been an officer in the Chicago militia and had enlisted. His service was with the Fifth Illinois Volunteer Infantry and had first taken him to Porto Rico and later to the Philippines. He served in the outlying southern provinces and his superiors soon recognized his genius for getting along with the natives. Because of it he received his appointment in the regular army and his detached detail.

Lieutenant Miller was but 24 years old when he first enlisted. Yet he left a soldier's sweetheart behind him in Illinois and when he received the permanent detail the sweetheart came into the wilds to him and they were married. All the years between then and now Mrs. Miller has spent at the side of her husband, and hand in hand they have sought to lead the way for their charges from the darkness of barbarism to the light of civilization and to better living. They have left behind a monument of accomplishment that is perhaps unequaled in the history of so small a force working for the uplift.

Palawan is the very outpost of the Philippines. It lies in that great reach of the island that runs out to the southeast, two days' journey nearly to Borneo, and separates the China Sea from Sulu Sea. It is a strip of land 20 miles wide and 275 miles long. Timbered mountains store the moisture which makes its valleys perennially feritle. Its long coast line offers itself to the spoliation of the Moro pirates, who have swarmed through these waters for centuries and have preyed continuously upon their natives. The mountain people and those of the valleys are wild but sweet natured and simple. They are the Tagbanos, good-natured wanderers, for whom much hope is expressed. Yet all was chaos, and war never ceased in the old days.

It was into these conditions that Lieutenant Miller brought his young wife. The men of the army protested against such exposure, but the young officer believed that he knew the natives better than they and that he was safe with them. He established himself at Puerto Princesa, which had once been a Spanish town of some importance, but had become a deserted city of the south seas. Here he made his capital and here he began his work with the natives.

Soon he was able to muster a number of chosen young natives into a militia organization. These he supplied with arms and drilled. His aim was the repelling of the Moros. Salip Akib had long been the terror of the coasts. The natives had ben ineffective as warriors and the trades were at the option of the pirates. Lieutenant Miller was well prepared before he struck a blow.

Then one summer night the news was brought that the pirates were ashore at a village up the coast and the natives were being robbed of their stores and animals. The raiders had gorged themselves, had stolen a score of the pretty women of the settlement for barter in other ports and were carousing in the village. The governor massed his constabulary and crept upon the town. The pirates were surprised, but expected an easy victory. But they had reckoned without the big American, who was a fiend when aroused. His followers had been drilled into efficiency, but were yet timid, not knowing their strength when armed with American guns. But they followed their chief to battle in fairly good part. The pirates were cut to pieces and the band broken up. The American that day won for himself the title of "the demon." The timid natives learned that they were able to stand against their hereditary enemy. The gratitude of the whole community came to the governor. Recruits came to his arms.

The band of Salip Tomi gave the second big battle in the working out of the problems of this isolated law and order scheme. "The demon" met this band under similar conditions and the results were the same. The timid natives found that they could fight and that they liked it. They placed themselves at the command of the governor and did his bidding without question. They came to call him king and his word was law. They carried the tales of him to the ends of the island and all the people proclaimed him. None would have dared stand against him, even had they not loved him. He gave his orders as to cessation of war among the tribes and the allotment of land. In two years he had brought peace into the whole island and found it in readiness for his real programme. The fear of his arms among the Moros became so great that for six years before his death there was not a piratical raid on any part of the island. The natives called him king, and his powers with them were absolute. To all intents and purposes he was in reality king; for them there was no authority in the land but his.

Being a practical man, Lieutenant Miller knew that if the people prospered, it would be through a cultivation of their fertile soil. They were mostly nomadic, wandering from place to place. He exerted all his influence to get them to settle down and make themselves permanent homes, cultivating more land.

The Tagbanos, or inland people, were the favorites with the governor. They were intelligent, tractable, musical, lovable. He determined that he would do something for these people to fix their habits and tie them to the soil. It was in the carrying out of this plan that he lost his life.

The Aborian river runs inland through a fertile valley near Puerto Princesa. Twenty-six miles up this stream Governor Miller selected the site for a model colony he planned to plant. Here he would erect a school that should be an agricultural and demonstration plant. Here he would get the children of the Tagbanos to go to the industrial school. On the fertile lands that lay round about he would locate their parents. These he would show how to farm at the same time that the children were attending school. He would teach them the virtues of a farm life by actually demonstrating it to them.

Governor Miller told his little plan to the provisional government and secured an appropriation with which to begin it. A little money he made go a long way, for the natives volunteered to do the work without charge, and there was not much call for the fine finish. The colony was this spring drawing on toward completion, and as it was the particular pet of the governor, he formed the habit of running up to see it every night after work in a gasoline launch.

It was while returning from one of these trips that the launch was upset. Governor Miller, though a great, strong, athletic man, had the vulnerable point of an inability to swim. The men who knew him were surprised to know that he should drown in a narrow river. They supposed, of course, he could swim. But when the boat turned over the King of Balawan, the savior of the people, the man who had started the thousands on the road to development, went unceremoniously to the bottom and his native companions dived for hours before they were able to recover his body.

So there had settled down upon Palawan the gloom of the great loss. The people mourn the death of the American as they have never grieved for anything before. The great work which he has established for them is at a standstill and its future is in doubt. Such work requires the genius of a man who fits into just such a nook, and civil service or the discretion of the men higher up is unable to determine just what are the qualities needed even were the man with these qualities idealist enough to give up the world to which he has been accustomed to live among the people of the wild for the sake of doing good.

And the Moros, these Samals or gypsies of the sea, are again at their depredations. They had thought this big American a demon, a thing of supernatural strength and of charmed life. Yet he had sunk and drowned with his boat turned over. So would all his kind. They would throw the next big American overboard and drown him.

Before a congressional committee last winter Major General Bell, chief of staff for the army, was telling of some of the remarkable men of that service and of the effective work they were doing. Lieutenant Miller cited as the most prominent of these. General Bell told of his work, and concluded by saying:

"I had heard it stated that he could not be replaced by a company, probably not by a battalion, and possibly not by a regiment of troops."

This was merely from the military standpoint of keeping the peace, and assuredly the island overrun with troops would not have the beneficial effect upon the natives that was being accomplished by Miller.

Autumn Arbor Day.

He who plants a tree,
He plants love;
Tents of coolness spreading out above
Wayfarers he may not live to see,
Gifts that grow are best;
Hands that bless are best.
Plant—Life does the rest!
Heaven and earth help him who plants a tree,
And his work his own reward shall be
—Lucy Larom.

The observance of Arbor Day has created a patriotic interest in the planting and preservation of trees. It has convinced the public of the importance of preventing and stopping forest fires, of the need of re-foresting the vast mountain areas from which the timber has been cut, and of the necessity of conserving the forests at sources of our streams thereby to regulate the flow of water and to lessen the floods and freshets which rob the land of its soil and fertility.

Morover it is now generally admitted that Arbor Day should be observed when all the country schools are in session. For this purpose Friday, Oct. 28, 1910, is designated as Autumn Arbor Day, and all the schools, both public and private, are hereby urged to observe the day by suitable exercises, especially by the planting of trees. Let us all plant trees. Let us plant trees for fruit, for shade, for beauty and for the sake of the many industries in which wood is used. Let us plant trees for the sake of ourselves and our posterity, for the sake of the nation and of humanity everywhere. Let us put our prayers for future blessings into visible shape by starting trees that will answer our prayers by making possible the conservation of our national resources and the prepetuation of our national greatness.

A Few Reports Corrected.

EDITOR PRESS:—

Please allow me space in your paper, in which I wish to nail some lies, which have been reported in our Valley as well as in Emporium. The first is the false report of my wife and myself not paying for the property we now have. Our good (?) friend, if you wish to call him such, has perhaps forgotten that more than half of the amount for our property was paid twenty-nine years ago and if he denies this statement, we can show him receipts signed by his wife and the balance of purchase money was paid when he and his wife went before Mr. M. M. Larrabee, J. P., and had the deed made out and the full amount receipted on said deed which can be seen at the Court House in Emporium. The same party has sent out the report that I cheated him out of twenty-eight dollars worth of ginseng in weighing it. Now I weigh ginseng and pay for it on the same scales that I weigh the goods that I sell over my counter and I will give ten dollars to the party who will show that I have cheated in weight or measure. Another lie of our good friend, as you may call him, is that I stole forty or fifty dollars worth of lumber from the School Board of Shippen township and got it home before day-break with my team and hid it in my barn under the hay, and then built two porches with it. Now I will say that these are lies, without polish or whitewash. There is not one dollar's worth of lumber in either porch that I did not buy at Mr. Rowley's lumber yard in Emporium and the old lumber, my good friend who has so much to say about, is the lumber I sent my offer into the school board for and they accepted, deducting the same from my order for carpentar work, and every man that is honest and just in his judgment will say the school board was correct in selling the lumber at my offer. One more lie will be sufficient for this time. Our good friend made the statement that one director paid forty dollars of a grocery bill with lumber. Now there has not been one school director ever paid one dollar with lumber to me for store bills or anything else. I have more respect for our officers than to give out or report such a lie. If this is not enough we will give more later on.

THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Amidst numerous difficulties the servants deserted. As Miss Innes locked up for the night she was startled by a dark figure on the veranda. Unseemly noises disturbed her during the night. In the morning Miss Innes found a strange link cuff-button in a hamper. Gertrude and Halsey arrived with Jack Bailey. The house was awakened by a revolver shot and Arnold Armstrong was found shot to death in the hall. Miss Innes found Halsey's revolver on the lawn. He and Jack Bailey had disappeared. The link cuff-button mysteriously disappeared. Detective Jamieson arrived. Gertrude revealed she was engaged to Jack Bailey, with whom she talked in the billiard room a few moments before the murder. Jamieson accused Miss Innes of holding back evidence. He imprisoned an intruder in an empty room. The prisoner escaped down a laundry chute. Gertrude was suspected. A negro found the other half of what proved to be Jack Bailey's cuff-button. Halsey reappears and says he and Bailey left in response to a telegram. Gertrude said she had given Bailey an unloaded revolver, fearing to give him a loaded weapon. Cashier Bailey of Paul Armstrong's bank, defunct, was arrested for embezzlement. Halsey said Armstrong wrecked his own bank and could clear Bailey. Paul Armstrong's death was announced. Halsey's fiancee, Louise Armstrong, was found at the lodge. The lodgekeeper said Louise and Arnold had a long talk the night of the murder. Louise was prostrated. Louise told Halsey, that while she still loved him she was to marry another, and that he would despise her when he learned the whole story. It developed that Dr. Walker and Louise were to be married. A prowler was heard in the house. Louise was found at the bottom of the circular staircase.

"I was not sleeping well," she began, "partly, I think, because I had slept during the afternoon. Liddy brought me some hot milk at ten o'clock and I slept until 12. Then I wakened and—I got to thinking about things, and worrying, so I could not go to sleep.

"I was wondering why I had not heard from Arnold since the—since I saw him that night at the lodge. I was afraid he was ill, because—he was to have done something for me, and he had not come back. It must have been three when I heard some one rapping. I sat up and listened, to be quite sure, and the rapping kept up. I was cautious, and I was about to call Liddy. Then suddenly I thought I knew what it was. The east entrance and circular staircase were always used by Arnold when he was out late, and sometimes, when he forgot his key, he would rap and I would go down and let him in. I thought he had come back to see me—I didn't think about the time, for his hours were always erratic. But I was afraid I was too weak to get down the stairs. The knocking kept up, and just as I was about to call Liddy, she ran through the room and out into the hall. I got up then, feeling weak and dizzy, and put on my dressing-gown. If it was Arnold, I knew I must see him.

"It was very dark everywhere, but, of course, I knew my way. I felt along for the stair-rail, and went down as quickly as I could. The knocking had stopped, and I was afraid I was too late. I got to the foot of the staircase and over to the door on to the east veranda. I had never thought of anything but that it was Arnold, until I reached the door. It was unlocked and opened about an inch. Everything was black; it was perfectly dark outside. I felt very queer and shaky. Then I thought perhaps Arnold had used his key; he did—strange things sometimes, and I turned around. Just as I reached the foot of the staircase I thought I heard some one coming. My nerves were going anyhow, there in the dark, and I could scarcely stand. I got up as far as the third or fourth step; then I felt that some one was coming toward me on the staircase. The next instant a hand met mine on the stair-rail. Some one brushed past me, and I screamed. Then I must have fainted."

That was Louise's story. There could be no doubt of its truth, and the thing that made it inexpressibly awful to me was that the poor girl had crept down to answer the summons of a brother who would never need her kindly offices again. Twice, now, without apparent cause, some one had entered the house by means of the east entrance; had apparently gone his way unhindered through the house, and gone out again as he had entered. Had this unknown visitor been there a third time, the night Arnold Armstrong was murdered? Or a fourth, the time Mr. Jamieson had locked some one in the clothes chute?

Sleep was impossible, I think, for any of us. We dispersed finally to bathe and dress, leaving Louise little the worse for her experience. But I determined that before the day was over she must know the true state of affairs. Another decision I made, and I put it into execution immediately after breakfast. I had one of the unused bedrooms in the east wing, back along the small corridor, prepared for occupancy, and from that time on Alex, the gardener, slept there. One man in that barn of a house was an absurdity, with things happening all the time, and I must say that Alex was as unobjectionable as any one could possibly have been.

The next morning, also, Halsey and I made an exhaustive examination of the circular staircase, the small entry at its foot, and the cardroom opening from it. There was no evidence of anything unusual the night before, and had we not ourselves heard the rapping noises, I should have felt that Louise's imagination had run away with her. The outer door was closed and locked, and the staircase curved above us, for all the world like any other staircase.

"My Home Is in Englewood," the Doc tor Began.

Halsey, who had never taken seriously my account of the night Liddy and I were there alone, was grave enough now. He examined the paneling of the wainscoting above and below the stairs, evidently looking for a secret door, and suddenly there flashed into my mind the recollection of a scrap of paper that Mr. Jamieson had found among Arnold Armstrong's effects. As nearly as possible I repeated its contents to him, while Halsey took them down in a note-book.

"I wish you had told me this before," he said, as he put the memorandum carefully away. We found nothing at all in the house, and I expected little from any examination of the porch and grounds. But as we opened the outer door something fell into the entry with a clatter. It was a cue from the billiard room.

Halsey picked it up with an exclamation.

"That's careless enough," he said. "Some of the servants have been amusing themselves."

I was far from convinced. Not one of the servants would go into that wing at night unless driven by dire necessity. And a billiard cue! As a weapon of either offense or defense it was an absurdity, unless one accepted Liddy's hypothesis of a ghost, and even then, as Halsey pointed out, a billiard-playing ghost would be a very modern evolution of an ancient institution.

That afternoon we, Gertrude, Halsey and I, attended the coroner's inquest in town. Dr. Stewart had been summoned also, it transpiring that in that early Sunday morning, when Gertrude and I had gone to our rooms, he had been called to view the body. We went, the four of us, in the machine, preferring the execrable roads to the matinee train, with half of Casanova staring at us. And on the way we decided to say nothing of Louise and her interview with her stepbrother the night he died. The girl was in trouble enough as it was.

CHAPTER XVII.

A Hint of Scandal.

In giving the gist of what happened at the inquest, I have only one excuse—to recall to the reader the events of the night of Arnold Armstrong's murder. Many things had occurred which were not brought out at the inquest and some things were told there that were new to me. Altogether, it was a gloomy affair, and the six men in the corner, who constituted the coroner's jury, were evidently the merest puppets in the hands of that all-powerful gentlemen, the coroner.

Gertrude and I sat well back, with our veils down. There were a number of people I knew: Barbara Fitzhugh, in extravagant mourning—she always went into black on the slightest provocation, because it was becoming—and Mr. Jarvis, the man who had come over from the Greenwood club the night of the murder. Mr. Harton was there, too, looking impatient as the inquest dragged, but alive to every particle of evidence. From a corner Mr. Jamieson was watching the proceedings intently.

Dr. Stewart was called first. His evidence was told briefly, and amounted to this: On the Sunday morning previous, at a quarter before five, he had been called to the telephone. The message was from a Mr. Jarvis, who asked him to come at once to Sunnyside, as there had been an accident there, and Mr. Arnold Armstrong had been shot. He dressed hastily, gathered up some instruments, and drove to Sunnyside.

He was met by Mr. Jarvis, who took him at once to the east wing. There, just as he had fallen, was the body of Arnold Armstrong. There was no need of the instruments; the man was dead. In answer to the coroner's question—no, the body had not been moved, save to turn it over. It lay at the foot of the circular staircase. Yes, he believed death had been instantaneous. The body was still somewhat warm and rigor mortis had not set in. It occurred late in cases of sudden death. No, he believed the probability of suicide might be eliminated; the wounds could have been self-inflicted, but with difficulty, and there had been no weapon found.

The doctor's examination was over, but he hesitated and cleared his throat.

"Mr. Coroner," he said, "at the risk of taking up valuable time, I would like to speak of an incident that may or may not throw some light on this matter."

The audience was alert at once.

"Kindly proceed, doctor," the coroner said.

"My home is in Englewood, two miles from Casanova," the doctor began. "In the absence of Dr. Walker, a number of Casanova people have been consulting me. A month ago—five weeks, to be exact—a woman whom I had never seen came to my office. She was in deep mourning and kept her veil down, and she brought for examination a child, a boy of six. The little fellow was ill; it looked like typhoid, and the mother was frantic. She wanted a permit to admit the youngster to the Children's hospital in town here, where I am a member of the staff, and I gave her one. The incident would have escaped me, but for a curious thing. Two days before Mr. Armstrong was shot, I was sent for to go to the Country club; some one had been struck with a golf-ball that had gone wild. It was late when I left—I was on foot, and about a mile from the club, on the Clayburg road, I met two people. They were disputing violently, and I had no difficulty in recognizing Mr. Armstrong. The woman, beyond doubt, was the one who had consulted me about the child."

At this hint of scandal, Mrs. Ogden Fitghugh sat up very straight. Jamieson was looking slightly skeptical, and the coroner made a note.

"The Children's hospital, you say, doctor?" he asked.

"Yes. But the child, who was entered as Lucien Wallace, was taken away by his mother two weeks ago. I have tried to trace them and failed."

All at once I remembered the telegram sent to Louise by some one signed F. L. W.—presumably Dr. Walker. Could the veiled woman be the Nina Carrington of the message? But it was only idle speculation. I had no way of finding out, and the inquest was proceeding.

The report of the coroner's physician came next. The post-mortem examination showed that the bullet had entered the chest in the fourth left intercostal space and had taken an oblique course downward and backward, piercing both the heart and lungs. The left lung was collapsed, and the exit point of the ball had been found in the muscles of the back to the left of the spinal column. It was improbable that such a wound had been self-inflicted, and its oblique downward course pointed to the fact that the shot had been fired from above. In other words, as the murdered man had been found dead at the foot of a staircase, it was probable that the shot had been fired by some one higher up on the stairs. There were no marks of powder. The bullet, a 38 caliber, had been found in the dead man's clothing, and was shown to the jury.

Mr. Jarvis was called next, but his testimony amounted to little. He had been summoned by telephone to Sunnyside, had come over at once with the steward and Mr. Winthrop, at present out of town. They had been admitted by the housekeeper, and had found the body lying at the foot of the staircase. He had made a search for a weapon, but there was none around. The outer entry door in the east wing had been unfastened and was open about an inch.

I had been growing more and more nervous. When the coroner called Mr. John Bailey, the room was filled with suppressed excitement. Mr. Jamieson went forward and spoke a few words to the coroner, who nodded. Then Halsey was called.

"Mr. Innes," the coroner said, "will you tell under what circumstances you saw Mr. Arnold Armstrong the night he died?"

"I saw him first at the Country club," Halsey said quietly. He was rather pale, but very composed. "I stopped there with my automobile for gasolene. Mr. Armstrong had been playing cards. When I saw him there he was coming out of the cardroom talking to Mr. John Bailey."

"The nature of the discussion—was it amicable?"

Halsey hesitated.

"They were having a dispute," he said. "I asked Mr. Bailey to leave the club with me and come to Sunnyside over Sunday."

"Isn't it a fact, Mr. Innes, that you took Mr. Bailey away from the clubhouse because you were afraid there would be blows?"

"The situation was unpleasant," Halsey said evasively.

"At that time had you any suspicion that the Traders' bank had been wrecked?"

"No."

"What occurred next?"

"Mr. Bailey and I talked in the billiard room until 2:30."

"And Mr. Arnold Armstrong came there, while you were talking?"

"Yes. He came about half-past two. He rapped at the east door, and I admitted him."

The silence in the room was intense. Mr. Jamieson's eyes never left Halsey's face.

"Will you tell us the nature of his errand?"

"He brought a telegram that had come to the club for Mr. Bailey."

"He was sober?"

"Perfectly, at that time. Not earlier."

"Was not his apparent friendliness a change from his former attitude?"

"Yes. I did not understand it."

"How long did he stay?"

"About five minutes. Then he left by the east entrance."

"What occurred then?"

"We talked for a few minutes, discussing a plan Mr. Bailey had in mind. Then I went to the stables, where I kept my car, and got it out."

"Leaving Mr. Bailey alone in the billiard room?"

"My sister was there."

Mrs. Ogden Fitzhugh had the courage to turn and eye Gertrude through her lorgnon.

"And then?"

"I took the car along the lower road, not to disturb the household. Mr. Bailey came down across the lawn, through the hedge, and got into the car on the road."

"Then you know nothing of Mr. Armstrong's movements after he left the house?"

"Nothing. I read of his death Monday evening for the first time."

"Mr. Bailey did not see him on his way across the lawn?"

"I think not. If he had seen him he would have spoken of it."

"Thank you. That is all. Miss Gertrude Innes."

Gertrude's replies were fully as concise as Halsey's. Mrs. Fitzhugh subjected her to a close inspection, commencing with her hat and ending with her shoes. I flatter myself she found nothing wrong with either her gown or her manner, but poor Gertrude's testimony was the reverse of comforting. She had been summoned, she said, by her brother, after Mr. Armstrong had gone. She had waited in the billiard room with Mr. Bailey until the automobile had been ready. Then she had locked the door at the foot of the staircase, and, taking a lamp, had accompanied Mr. Bailey to the main entrance of the house, and had watched him cross the lawn. Instead of going at once to her room, she had gone back to the billiard room for something which had been left there. The cardroom and billiard room were in darkness. She had groped around, found the article she was looking for, and was on the point of returning to her room, when she had heard some one fumbling at the lock at the east outer door. She had thought it was probably her brother, and had been about to go to the door, when she heard it open. Almost immediately there was a shot, and she had run panic-stricken through the drawing room and had roused the house.

NO CLOUDS IN SIGHT

COLONEL GEORGE HARVEY SAYS COUNTRY ALL RIGHT.

THE WRITER SEES NO CLOUD

Striking Article In North American Review That Is Attracting Wide Attention.

The attention of business and professional men in all portions of the country has been attracted to a strikingly strong article by Col. George Harvey in the September issue of the North American Review in which the writer takes a view of the greatest hopefulness for the future of America and Americans. The article is entitled "A Plea for the Conservation of Common Sense," and it is meeting with the cordial approval of business men of all shades of political opinion throughout the entire country. In part, Colonel Harvey says:

"Unquestionably a spirit of unrest dominates the land. But, if it be true that fundamentally the condition of the country is sound, must we necessarily succumb to despondency, abandon effort looking to retrieval and cringe like cravens before clouds that only threaten? Rather ought we not to analyze conditions, search for causes, find the root of the distress, which even now exists only in men's minds, and then, after the American fashion, apply such remedies as seems most likely to produce beneficent results?

Capital and Labor Not Antagonistic.

"The Link that connects labor with capital is not broken but we may not deny that it is less cohesive than it should be or than conditions warrant. Financially, the country is stronger than ever before in its history. Recovery from a panic so severe as that of three years ago was never before so prompt and comparatively complete. The masses are practically free from debt. Money is held by the banks in abundance and rates are low.

"Why, then, does capital pause upon the threshold of investment? The answer, we believe, to be plain. It awaits adjustment of the relations of government to business. * * * The sole problem consists of determining how government can maintain an even balance between aggregations of interests, on the one hand, and the whole people, on the other, protecting the latter against extortion and saving the former from mad assaults.

"The solution is not easy to find for the simple reason that the situation is without precedent. But is not progress being made along sane and cautious lines? * * *

Conserve Common Sense.

"Is not the present, as we have seen, exceptionally secure? What, then, of preparations for the future? Patriotism is the basis of our institutions. And patriotism in the minds of our youth is no longer linked solely with fireworks and deeds of daring. It is taught in our schools. A new course has been added—a course in loyalty. Methodically, our children learn how to vote, how to conduct primaries, conventions and elections, how to discriminate between qualifications of candidates and, finally, how to govern as well as serve. They are taught to despise bribery and all forms of corruption and fraud as treason. Their creed, which they are made to know by heart, is not complex. It is simple, but comprehensive, no less beautiful in diction than lofty in aspiration. These are the pledges which are graven upon their memories:

"As it is cowardly for a soldier to run away from battle, so it is cowardly for any citizen not to contribute his share to the well-being of his country. America is my own dear land; she nourishes me, and I will love her and do my duty to her, whose child, servant and civil soldier I am.

"As the health and happiness of my body depend upon each muscle and nerve and drop of blood doing its work in its place, so the health and happiness of my country depend upon each citizen doing his work in his place.

"These young citizens are our hostages to fortune. Can we not safely assume that the principles animating their lives augur well for the permanency of the Republic? When before have the foundation stones of continuance been laid with such care and promise of durability?

"The future, then, is bright. And the present? But one thing is needful. No present movement is more laudable than that which looks to conservation of natural resources. But let us never forget that the greatest inherent resource of the American people is Common Sense. Let that be conserved and applied without cessation, and soon it will be found that all the ills of which we complain but know not of are only such as attend upon the growing pains of a great and blessed country.

He Knows the Game.

According to the Metropolitan Magazine, Fire Chief John Conway of Jersey City, has solved the baseball excuse question by the posting of the following printed notice on his desk at fire headquarters:

"All requests for leave of absence owing to grandmothers' funerals, lame back, house cleaning, moving, sore throat, headache, brainstorm, cousins' wedding, general indisposition, etc., must be handed to the chief not later than ten o'clock on the morning of the game."

Saving Money at Home.

There's lots of wastefulness in soap. People usually argue that a cake of soap costs five cents and that's all there is to it. But it isn't. "Easy Task Soap," for example, does twice the work of cheap, common rosin soaps, and costs the same. It does the work quicker, better and much more easily. Its saving qualities only begin with its price; it saves clothes, fuel and health. Don't use uncertain soaps. Get Easy Task at your grocer's.

Foiled.

He was very bashful and she tried to make it easy for him. They were driving along the seashore and she became silent for a time. "What's the matter?" he asked.

"O, I feel blue," she replied. "Nobody loves me and my hands are cold."

"You should not say that," was his word of consolation, "for God loves you, and your mother loves you, and you can sit on your hands."—Success Magazine.

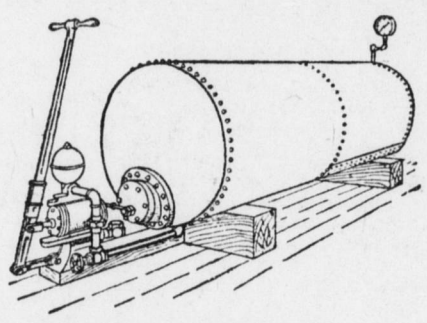
WATER SUPPLY SYSTEM CONVENIENT TO FARMERS

Makes Farm Life Attractive and Lessens Danger From Fire—Can Very Readily Be Used for Carrying Water to Dairy and Barns.

Can farmers have running water, hot or cold, in their dwelling houses? Most certainly. What will the cost be? Fifty dollars and up, depending upon the size of the house and the kind of equipment needed. This makes possible the bath and toilet room, protection from fire, the easy washing of windows and walks, the sprinkling of lawns, the irrigating of gardens, and all the other conveniences which a few years ago were thought possible only in cities, where big water systems were available, writes Clarence A. Shamel in Orange Judd Farmer. This is one of the things that makes farm life attractive. It lessens the work in the house, insures a fine lawn and garden, reduces danger from fire, adds greatly to comfort and convenience in every direction.



Hand Pump and Pressure Tank.

The way to secure this is to install a water supply system, with a pressure tank in the basement. This pressure tank is so arranged that by pumping it full under strong air pressure the water is forced all over the house, and is available for the bathroom, toilet room and the garden or fire hose. The water is distributed about the house exactly as it is in city homes, by means of galvanized iron pipes. Where a small building is to be supplied and the amount of water to be used is not large, the system can be installed for $50. For the average house $90 is a better figure. Where the house is large, and where considerable amounts of water are needed for the lawn and garden, and possibly also for washing carriages, automobiles and horses, a larger system should be installed, costing up to $150. The cost of the system, therefore, depends upon the wishes of the owner and the demands that will be made upon it.

Its installation is easy, and its operation is exceedingly simple. Any pipe fitter or plumber can put in the plant so that it will work perfectly. All that is needed for operating is to keep the tank pressure up to the desired point. This may be 20, 40, 60 or 100 pounds. A few strokes of the pump, if the work is done by hand, is sufficient. If a lot of water is used, of course the amount of pumping will increase. By being economical in the use of water, that is to say, by wasting none, this matter of pumping is not at all a serious problem.

The most satisfactory method of pumping, however, is to use a windmill, or what is much better, a gasoline engine. Every up-to-date farm ought to have a small gasoline engine, which can be utilized not only for operating this water supply system, but for churning, sawing wood, cutting feed and doing a dozen and one other jobs about the farm. It would take only a few minutes of pumping to raise the pressure in the tank to the desired height. With the engine, it will not be necessary to be economical in using water, provided the well is a good one and the supply of water large.

I have a system of this kind in my country home. It was installed four years ago and cost $75. Previous to that time nothing of the kind had been used in my neighborhood. We take care of the waste water and sewage by running a large tile from the bathroom, one-quarter of a mile distant, to a large cistern, located in the center of a big field. This is disinfected about twice a year, and is easily handled. I have never had any trouble with the water pipes, even during the coldest weather. Neither have I had any difficulty with the waste system. In fact, the water supply is practically perfect, and I don't see how any farmer who can get together $75 or $100 can afford to be without it.

The illustrations indicate the arrangement of a water supply system, as can be readily seen is very simple. The system can also be used for supplying water to stock tanks, and these may be located anywhere on the farm. The pressure developed in the tank is sufficient to force the water anywhere wanted. This use will, of course, depend entirely upon the wishes of the owner, and is simply a matter of cost of pipes. It can very readily be used for delivering water to dairy or other stock barns, where it can be run into water troughs in the stalls, or elsewhere, as desired. On the whole, the farm water supply system is one of the most satisfactory that has ever been invented, and should be looked up by everyone who is desirous to secure comfort and convenience.

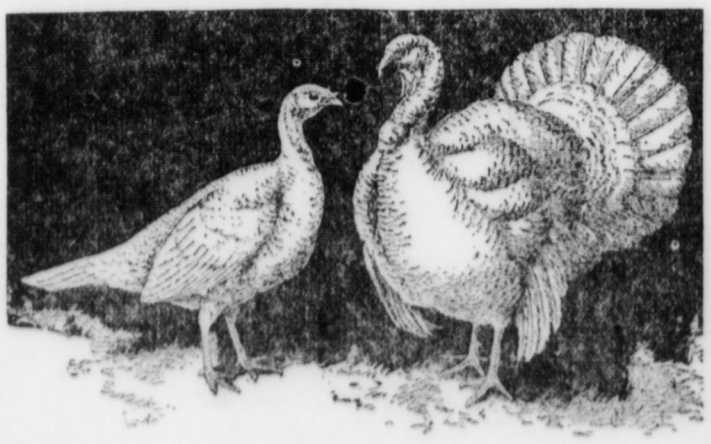
DELICATE BREED OF TURKEYS



It is well known to experienced breeders and nature students that black-plumaged birds will once in a while have white offspring; this explains the origin of what in this country is known as the White Holland turkey. So keen an observer as Tegetmeier is on record as saying that "it is well known that most birds, wild as well as tame, occasionally produce perfectly white individuals of more delicate constitution than the parents. There can be no doubt that the selection and pairing of such is the way in which the breed of white turkeys has been established and kept up." J. A. Leland, a noted Illinois breder of white turkeys, says: "As to color, I have never seen White Holland turkeys that did not show some black ticking in plumage during some period of their lives."

Saucy Soldier Shut Her Up.

Col. Robert C. Carter at a Nashville banquet was talking about campaign comrades.

"Then there was Dash of Company A," he said. "Dash had the reputation of being the nastiest tongued man in the regiment.

"It was Private Dash, you know, who, out foraging one evening on a rich estate, came accidentally upon the owner's wife, a grande dame in evening dress.

"Dash asked her for food. She refused him. He asked again. But, still refusing, she walked away.

"'No,' she said, 'I'll give you nothing, trespassing like this; I'll give you nothing. My mind is made up.'

"'Made up, is it?' said Dash. 'Like the rest of you, eh?'"

PUZZLED

Hard Work, Sometimes, to Raise Children.

Children's taste is ofttimes more accurate, in selecting the right kind of food to fit the body, than that of adults. Nature works more accurately through the children.

A Brooklyn lady says: "Our little boy had long been troubled with weak digestion. We could never persuade him to take more than one taste of any kind of cereal food. He was a weak little chap and we were puzzled to know what to feed him on.

"One lucky day we tried Grape-Nuts. Well, you never saw a child eat with such a relish, and it did me good to see him. From that day on it seemed as though we could almost see him grow. He would eat Grape-Nuts for breakfast and supper, and I think he would have liked the food for dinner.

"The difference in his appearance is something wonderful.

"My husband had never fancied cereal foods of any kind, but he became very fond of Grape-Nuts and has been much improved in health since using it.

"We are now a healthy family, and naturally believe in Grape-Nuts.

"A friend has two children who were formerly afflicted with rickets. I was satisfied that the disease was caused by lack of proper nourishment. They showed it. So I urged her to use Grape-Nuts as an experiment and the result was almost magical.

"They continued the food and today both children are well and strong as any children in this city, and, of course, my friend is a firm believer in Grape-Nuts for she has the evidence before her eyes every day."

MEET IN CONGRESS AT ROME

Official announcement of the Seventh International Congress on Tuberculosis, which will include representatives from every civilized country in the world, has been made by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. The congress will be held in Rome from September 24 to 30, 1911, and will be similar in many respects to that held in Washington in the fall of 1908. The congress, which meets every three years, will be under the direct patronage of the king and queen of Italy.

An American committee of 100 will be appointed as the official representatives of the United States. Meanwhile the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis is acting in that capacity and its office in New York will be the headquarters for the United States delegation. The secretary general of the congress is Prof. Vittorio Ascoli of Rome.

As a direct result of the stimulus of the last international congress held in this country, the American committee will be able to report that the number of tuberculosis agencies in this country have been tripled in the three years. More than twice as much money is being spent in the fight against tuberculosis by private societies and institutions, and the appropriations of federal, state, municipal and county have increased nearly fourfold. It is estimated that nearly $15,000,000 will be spent in anti-tuberculosis work in 1910.

Confusing.

Craig Biddle, at a dinner in Newport, was describing the changing odds on the Jeffries-Johnson fight at Reno.

"Eight to four and a half on Jeffries—nine to six the other way about—three to one and a quarter—it's rather confusing, isn't it?" he said. "In fact, it's almost as confusing as the two girls' talk about a secret.

"'Mary,' said the first girl, 'told me that you had told her that secret I told you not to tell her.'

"'The nasty thing,' said the other girl. 'I told her not to tell you I told her.'

"'Well, said the first girl, 'I told her I wouldn't tell you she told me—so don't tell her I did.'"

Attention Sick Women

If you had positive proof that a certain remedy for female ills had made many remarkable cures, would you not feel like trying it?

If during the last thirty years we have not succeeded in convincing every fair-minded woman that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured thousands and thousands of women of the ills peculiar to their sex, then we long for an opportunity to do so by direct correspondence. Meanwhile read the following letters which we guarantee to be genuine and truthful.

Hudson, Ohio.—"I suffered for a long time from a weakness, inflammation, dreadful pains each month and suppression. I had been doctoring and receiving only temporary relief, when a friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so, and wrote to you for advice. I have faithfully followed your directions and now, after taking only five bottles of the Vegetable Compound, I have every reason to believe I am a well woman. I give you full permission to use my testimonial." —Mrs. Lena Carmocino, Hudson, Ohio. R. F. D. No. 7.

St. Regis Falls, N. Y.—"Two years ago I was so bad that I had to take to my bed every month, and it would last from two to three weeks. I wrote to you for advice and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in dry form. I am happy to say that I am cured, thanks to your medicine and good advice. You may use my letter for the good of others." —Mrs. J. H. Breyere, St. Regis Falls, N. Y.

There is absolutely no doubt about the ability of this grand old remedy, made from the roots and herbs of our fields, to cure female diseases. We possess volumes of proof of this fact, enough to convince the most skeptical.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

Great O. A. B. C. Demonstration.

Perhaps no present-day movement among the Protestant Evangelical Churches has created a wider attention and interest than the one characterized by the initials, O. A. B. C., which stand for Organized Adult Bible Class. The movement is connected with the Sunday Schools of the country and is endorsed by all denominations. Our sister State (Ohio) on our western border leads the movement in the number of such classes.

Pennsylvania is a very close second. Within the last two years, 2,150 classes, with a membership of 66,844, have been organized. Bible study with the view of a personal, practical every day application, is the object.

A rally of the representatives of these classes will be held Friday, October 14th, at Altoona, in connection, with the Annual Convention of the Pennsylvania State Sabbath School Association, October 12, 13, 14.

A street demonstration of the men's classes will be a feature of the day. It is expected that ten thousand men will participate. Ex-Governor Hanley of Indianapolis, Ind., will address the mass meeting following the street demonstration. His topic will be "Civic Evolution." Every County in the State will be represented in this demonstration.

Contents for October.

"The Life Story of J. Pierpont Morgan," which begins in the October Metropolitan, is described as a biography of the financier, rather than a theory of Wall Street or an argument about the money power. The first instalment gives many hitherto unpublished facts about Mr. Morgan's ancestry and early life. Another feature of the October issue is a new serial, "Mrs. Maxon Protests," by Anthony Hope. An authorized statement of President Taft's views on conservation introduces H. J. Whigham's article on "Guarding the People's Property," an account of what the Taft administration has accomplished for conservation. In "Fishing for Compliments" Wallace Irvin humorously describes the American craving for favorable comment on country from unsympathetic foreigners. What the working girl regards as proper and improper is picturesquely described by Miss Elizabeth H. Westwood in "Working Girls at Play." In "The Middleman," H. W. Collingwood shows the plight of the former under the present system of marketing his product. A well-illustrated art-article describes the work of one of the younger artists, J. Louis Mora. There are stories by Stephen French Whitman, Margaretta Tuttle, Lily A. Long and Gurden Backus, and the usuual departments of "Notes and Pictures," Humor, Books and Drama.
